

Training & Tips for Front-Line Staff

Overview:

Globally, the travel industry is unknowingly (via airlines and hotels) a key conduit for human trafficking, which has been dubbed "modern day slavery" and is defined by the U.S. State Department as the recruitment, transportation, or harboring of people by means of deception or coercion. Victims, often mentally and physically abused, are forced into prostitution, unfair working conditions, or other exploitive

Purpose:

Purpose: Training/educational resources for meeting professionals to share with front-line staff who will be at hotels, conventions, and airports. This would entail educating front-line staff and providing examples of how to identify victims. These event staff are the first interaction with event attendees and guests, and have the biggest opportunity to report any suspicious activity. These include:

- Front Desk Staff and Room Attendants in Hotels
- Flight Attendants and Customer Service Agents at Airports
- Registration Desk Staff at Event Venues

Hotels

INDICATORS OF HUMAN TRAFFICKING:

- Pays with cash; checks in for several days or a week
- Requests for extra towels and/or bedding
- Doesn't have any ID or their companion has their identification
- Asks for room with view of parking lot or far away from main entrance
- Persons checking-in appears to have very little luggage with them
- Reports of excessive noise, telephone/music on throughout the entire day
- Do Not Disturb sign is consistently on the door
- Anxious or nervous behavior and avoids contact with staff
- Individuals dress inappropriately for their age or have lower quality clothing compared to others in their party
- The same person reserves multiple rooms

HOW TO RESPOND:

- Once a victim can be identified, their safety should be of primary concern. Consider establishing relationships with nearby sister hotels where victims can be taken during an investigation to keep them out of harm's way.
- Immediately advise the manager of all information – DO NOT confront victim or offender

Airlines, Airports & Travel

INDICATORS OF HUMAN TRAFFICKING:

- Bruises, cuts, burns, or other injuries at various stages of healing could be a sign of human trafficking
- It could also be the use of force, or a person being guided by the arm, shoved into a car, or delivered to another person who then escorts the potential victim to a different location or vehicle
- It might be a sign of human trafficking if a person seems disoriented, lost, and/or fearful of their situation
- Physical control of travel documents of an adult traveler by a co-traveler
- Restricting the movement and social interaction of an adult traveler by a co-traveler
- An adult traveler who is unclear on details of his/her final destination or point of contact
- A child traveler who appears to be accompanied by someone claiming to be the parent or guardian who is in fact not related to the child
- Transactions associated with sex trafficking include multiple simultaneous charges on ride-hailing services like Uber and Lyft

HOW TO RESPOND:

- Be observant of passengers as they check-in, board, and fly, including those who travel with them and young women travelling alone
- For suspected cases onboard flights, inform the pilot in command so they can determine next steps
- If at an airport, contact police or appropriate law enforcement and report what you have seen
- Report and discuss with your supervisor

INDICATORS OF HUMAN TRAFFICKING:

- Individuals waiting at a table or bar and picked up by a male (trafficker or customer)
- Individuals (traffickers) will learn the hours and operations of the casinos, as well as the schedules of the head of security and pit bosses
- A person constantly circulating the casino floor as if they're looking for someone
- No freedom of movement or monitored movement
- Victims of both sex and labor trafficking may be found in hostess bars and strip clubs in the United States. Hostess bars or cantinas may be open to the public, sell food and drinks, and offer music and dancing.
- In both hostess bars and strip clubs, labor trafficking may be present if victims are forced to dance, serve as hostesses, or sell drinks and/or food.

HOW TO RESPOND

- Security should approach a potential victim gently, and it is better if they are dressed in plain clothes versus a uniform.
- Security staff must be able to ask the right questions to properly assess the situation.
- Before investigating, security should ensure that basic needs are being met, such as ensuring food and the ability to use a restroom
